Nova Scotia in the spotlight

The Tall Ships are returning to Nova Scotia this year and the popular festival is bigger than ever.

The mostly free event runs in Halifax from July 19-23, and features about 40 ships from all over North America. There will also be fireworks, concerts, food, and other events.

"We are showcasing the best of Nova Scotia history, culture, music, cuisine and family programming throughout the Tall Ships event," says Colin MacLean, president and CEO of the Waterfront Development Corporation. "With the amazing backdrop of the majestic Tall Ships, we are proud to show the best of who we are as a city, province and people."

The theme this year is the War of 1812. Parks Canada will also put on programming on the wharves by the Maritime Museum of the Atlantic and Citadel Hill.

Taking advantage of the time-shifting presence of the Tall Ships, the interactive activities will look back to a war some say played a key role in forming Canada.

"The War of 1812 was a turning point in Canada's history and Parks Canada is proud to ... bring this history alive," says Dave Danskin, visitor experience manager with Parks Canada. "Visitors will have the chance to step back in time to 1812 through a variety of interactive activities."

Members of the public will also get a rare chance to visit Georges Island in Halifax Harbour for a largely sold-out concert from Newfoundland's Hey Rosetta! on July 21. The island will be open again the next day, Sunday, for historic tours.

It's free to stroll along the waterfront and admire the ships from land, and a $5 day pass lets you board all of the ships. Children younger than 12 are free when accompanied by an adult.

The jam-packed schedule of the Tall Ships festival can make it tough to know which events are must-see, so Metro spoke with organizer Jennifer Angel about the things she has on her to-do list.

In the tradition of Nova Scotian hospitality, Angel starts by making sure you are well fed. The festival is partnering with Taste of Nova Scotia with "Food Fare by the Sea" next to Bishops Landing. Celebrity chefs and local restaurateurs will serve some of the ocean-themed dishes for which the province is famous.

Approximately 94,000 people took in the Tall Ships Nova Scotia Festival 2009. There are many events to keep you busy this year. CONTRIBUTED

There is music, too, at the CBC pavilion. It will offer free entertainment and nautical-themed music throughout the festival.

On Saturday, it will put on the ticketed Tall Ships Symphony. That will feature Symphony Nova Scotia, Old Man Luedecke, David Myles and Rose Cousins performing the 2012 Overture, Ships and Flags. The symphony will also put on a rollicking version of the 1812 Overture.

Casino Nova Scotia is hosting "A Band on Ship" (remove the spaces to get the pun) with free concerts inside and out at the casino.

Each evening will conclude with fireworks.

"It's a really deep program," Angel says.

She also flags a Sunday visit to Georges Island. Animators and re-enactors will provide interpretive tours of the fortified harbour base. Cross back to Halifax for the War of

More ports

- Following the five-day event in Halifax/Dartmouth from July 19-23, the Tall Ships Nova Scotia 2012 fleet will sail to five additional ports around the province: Lunenburg (July 25-26); Port Hawkesbury (July 25-26); Shelburne (July 28-29); Pictou (July 28-29); and Pugwash (July 28-29).

ed pirate house will thrill children. For $2, Theodore Tugboat will ferry you over to the Halifax KidzZone.

"It's a truncated version of the big harbour tour," Angel says of the crossing.

The Al Fresco Film Festo is getting nautical with the "Arr Fresco Film Festo" of sea-themed movies at its usual outdoors location near the Nova Scotia Power headquarters on the Halifax waterfront.

Oh, yeah — and there are ships, too.

"The interesting thing about the ships this time around is that they fit within the 1812 commemorative banner," Angel says.

A shipload of economic return

Impact. More than $30 million expected to be generated from Tall Ships and its various events

RICHARD WOODBURY
For Metro

As a marquee event, the Tall Ships generate large economic impacts in both Halifax and across Nova Scotia.

"We know that by virtue of the event being an enormous tourist attraction that many people will travel to Nova Scotia to the Tall Ships," says Colin MacLean, the president and CEO of the Waterfront Development Corporation Limited (WDCL).

The last time the Tall Ships came to town was 2009 and that event generated an economic impact of almost $33 million across the province, with the lion's share — more than $18 million — coming from Halifax.

MacLean says the goal this year is to exceed the numbers from 2009.

To get an accurate idea of the economic activity the Tall Ships generates, WDCL hires an economist who surveys visitors at the waterfront. People are asked questions such as where they are from and how much they are planning on spending while in Nova Scotia.

MacLean says WDCL is cautious about not overestimating the economic impacts. For example, one of the questions asked is what motivation the Tall Ships played in visiting Nova Scotia. The significance of the motivation is taken into account when calculating the economic impact.

"We take that and multiply it against the money they spend, so it's not overestimating the thing," says MacLean.

This also means the emphasis is on calculating money coming from outside the region, as opposed to the downtown office worker who is out on their lunch break or someone from another part of Nova Scotia.

In 2009, 94,000 people from outside Nova Scotia "came in part or in large part because of Tall Ships," says MacLean.

While the Tall Ships will be in Halifax from July 19-23, afterwards, some will head to the Nova Scotian ports of Lunenburg, Port Hawkesbury, Pictou, Pugwash and Shelburne, while some will head off for their next adventure.

The visits to the other Nova Scotian ports help spread the economic impact across the province.

FedEx pups. Animal-rescue official hopes story will draw attention to other dogs in need of a home

KATE HOWELL
Halifax@metronews.ca

People are lining up to adopt the 60 dogs transported to Halifax from the Happy Valley-Goose Bay SPCA, but the rescue team reminds hopeful owners there are other animals out there that need saving.

Shelley Cunningham, president of Litters 'n Critters Animal Rescue, is overjoyed by the public response to the dogs' plight. But she hopes it sheds light on a bigger problem across the province.

"There are so many other rescues and shelters that have dogs that need homes," Cunningham said on Tuesday. "If you're looking for a dog, please go to other shelters. There are so many homeless dogs."

On Saturday, FedEx flew the dogs from Newfoundland and Labrador to the Halifax airport. They were evacuated from the Happy Valley-Goose Bay SPCA and, later on, from foster homes due to forest fires in the area.

The rescue mission has generated coverage from news organizations across North America, including CNN, and on social media. Litters 'n Critters has received hundreds of adoption applications. Currently being looked after in foster homes in and around the HRM area, many pups have already found a permanent home with their foster caregivers.

That's the case for Rodney Habib, owner of Planet Paws in Dartmouth, now the proud owner of Pux, a female puppy he was fostering. Planet Paws and Funky Monkey Ice Hut are hosting a meet-and-greet with the adopted puppies from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday. All proceeds will be donated to Litters 'n Critters to help spay and neuter the dogs.

"It'll be a pretty big day, with the puppies and the community being able to show their support and buy some ice cream and help these animals," said Habib, an owner of three dogs now.

Dozens of puppies and eight adult dogs are still available for adoption.

Murder case

Halifax man given a conditional sentence

A Halifax man facing a charge of accessory to murder after the fact in the killing of Corey Duane Lucas won't be serving prison time.

Simon Peter Dugas, 27, was initially charged with first-degree murder in relation to the Lucas case. But a day after that murder charge was laid, it was reduced to the lesser offence of accessory after the fact.

On Tuesday at Nova Scotia Supreme Court, Dugas was given a conditional sentence of two years less a day for the charge, to be served in the community under witness protection.

As part of the agreed upon sentence that came Tuesday following his guilty plea, Dugas is banned from being in possession of weapons and ammunition.

According to an agreed statement of facts published Tuesday by the CBC, Chief Justice Joseph Kennedy opted against jail time for Dugas because of his co-operation with police during the case.

The statement of fact reads Dugas assisted in the disposing of evidence, including the gun allegedly used in the murder, and a bloody shirt.

Jason Matthew Halsey, 27, and Dylan Peter Roach, 20, are both charged with first-degree murder and attempted murder in the case.

Jenna Karlene Piercy, 27, has also been charged with accessory after the fact.

Lucas, 36, was gunned down in an apartment at 2711 Clifton St. May 25, and another 31-year-old man was shot, but survived and was later released from hospital.

Free water on the Halifax waterfront is a big attraction.

Halifax Water recently installed four water-tap stations along the waterfront for this week's Tall Ships Nova Scotia 2012 event for people to fill up their water containers and beat the heat. Each station has three blue water taps.

According to Halifax Water spokesman James Campbell,

Quoted

"On a business side (it's not a benefit), but I like free water."

Hannah Soder, who works at Waterfront Pizza and Wraps

On how the free taps probably cut into their water sales; business is brisk on hot days the water taps have been a very good investment.

"They're pretty well booked up," he said.

They were purchased in advance of the Canoe Sprint World Championships on Lake Banook in 2009. Since then, they've been used at the Jazz Fest, Blue Nose marathon and the FIVB beach-volleyball championships, among other events.

Community groups apply to Halifax Water for the taps and the water commission installs them. The only issue is Halifax Water is not allowed to give water away, so the lines are metered and event organizers pay for the water used.

And they're very popular. Campbell said the water taps are used at community events from June to September.

Downtown Coun. Dawn Sloane has received comments from residents about making the taps permanent fixtures on the waterfront.

"I'd love to see it too," she said. "When I was a kid, all over the downtown core we had water fountains."

It helps with episodes of heat exhaustion as well as cutting down on the environmental impacts of bottled water.

Council has discussed, although it was a while ago, installing more public water fountains. Sloane said it could make it back on the agenda.

Jennifer Angel with the Waterfront Development Corp. said they haven't considered making the taps permanent but it is a possibility.

"This installation for tall ships, as well as with the FIVB last year — it gives us a good chance to test it," she said. "We're open to trying new things."

"Sometimes we have to climb up the (29-metre-tall) mast, but I don't because I'm not a fan of heights, but everything else I'm pretty good at," she said.

The Unicorn, a U.S.-based teaching tall ship, sailed into Halifax Harbour out of the mist Tuesday morning. She's the first vessel to arrive for Tall Ships Nova Scotia 2012, which runs Thursday through Monday at the Halifax and Dartmouth waterfronts.

"It was really foggy and I couldn't see much at first but then I saw the green and hills — it's very pretty," she said of her first glimpse of Halifax. "I like it."

It's Wentzel's second run on board the tall ship. Her first was last year just as she turned 13 and sailed from Newport, R.I., to Boston. She said all she needed to know she learned fast in a day or two.

"So now I know what I'm doing, and it's better."

"You're responsible to and for each other on board a ship in ways you just aren't when you're growing up on land," she said.

The six students on board are aged 13 to 19 and are accompanied by a crew of eight, including the captain. Meagher said the students do everything from cleaning the heads (bathrooms) to navigating the ships. Some have sailing experience when they step on board and some don't.

"These girls on the ship right now have all been on before. One girl has signed up four times because she loves it so much," Meagher said.

Sailing excursions last between one to three weeks and cost upwards of $1,000 a week. The Unicorn, which sailed this time from Boston to Halifax, winters in Connecticut.

The ship received a lot of attention on the Halifax waterfront Tuesday morning as it refuelled near the Nova Scotia Power building before sailing to her berth next to Historic Properties, but the students were too exhausted from the around-the-clock shifts while at sea to notice much.

"I think they're more tired than anything," Meagher said.

"They will be excited once they get over being tired."

Halifax man has bike stolen on cross-Canada trip

A thief stole Coady Lee's bike and everything he's called home for the last two and a half months Monday afternoon in Gatineau, Que., right in front of security cameras.

Lee and a friend are on a cross-Canada bike trip to his home in Halifax that began in Tofino, B.C., in May.

He packed up to leave the National Capital Region Sunday and then stopped for a few hours at the Museum of Civilization.

"I locked my bike up in the courtyard, but when I came out the bike and everything on it was gone, with my lock cut on the ground," he said.

The bike was loaded up with Lee's camping gear and everything he needed for his trip — and a photo he takes with him wherever he goes, of him and his sister Nicole, who passed away when he was 14 years old.

Lee said the photo is reminder of a happy moment with his sister.

When he first realized

it was gone he was afraid, but now he knows he can remember her without it, he said.

He doesn't expect to get anything back, but since he spoke publicly about the theft, Lee has received offers of support — as well as new bikes and camping gear — from strangers. He's hoping to donate what he can't use to charity.

"I feel like we can help out a lot more people than just me," he said.

Mike Taylor said he and the Crown were trying to come up with dates for a three-day preliminary inquiry, which might not take place until late this fall or early 2013.

Taylor said a trial may not take place until next fall, adding that it's not clear how long a trial in the rare case could last.

"I wouldn't expect it would be in the spring sitting," he said. "It could very easily be in the fall of 2013."

The 41-year-old has yet to enter a plea, and lawyers in the case are expected to return to provincial court Wednesday to set dates for a preliminary hearing.

Court documents say one of the alleged offences happened between July 6, 2007, and Jan. 13, 2012, while the other offence is alleged to have happened between Jan. 10 and Jan. 13 of this year.

Time frame

- It could take months before Judge David MacAdam delivers his ruling, the group's lawyer, Derek Simon, told reporters.

"They can't get any closer than this case."

The group's legal argument centred on environmental restrictions that prohibit drilling within 100 metres of a water course.

Derek Simon, the group's

But the government has classified it as a man-made drainage ditch and therefore does not consider it a water course.

A lawyer for the Environment Department argued that if the judge does find fault with the minister's decision, an appropriate decision would be to amend the terms and conditions of the drilling permit. THE CANADIAN PRESS

ALEX BOUTILIER

The fund touted as a more accountable version of the much-maligned Industrial Expansion Fund has committed more than $396 million of public money since its inception.

Ten funding announcements for the Nova Scotia Jobs Fund since Feb. 14 total $371.1 million. Most of that money is earmarked for Irving Shipbuilding, which will benefit from $304 million over the 30-year life of the multibillion-dollar federal shipbuilding contracts. Even when the Irving deal is excluded, the Jobs Fund still committed $28.2 million more than the IEF did in 2011.

Economic and Rural Development and Tourism Minister Percy Paris, who introduced the Jobs Fund legislation, said he considers the money well spent.

"I see this as a good thing," Paris told Metro Tuesday.

"When I look at the businesses that we've attracted to the province in the last 18 months, I think they're significant."

ministers, the IEF was the subject of a scathing report from auditor general Jacques Lapointe in May 2011. That year, the provincial NDP announced $38.89 million in funding through the IEF.

In 2010, the province announced $190 million in funding from the IEF. Companies like Irving ($20 million), DSME

Trenton ($59.3 million), and Northern Pulp ($75 million) benefited most from that funding.

Paris said he believes the Jobs Fund is more accountable, citing an appointed board that provides investment advice to the government. He conceded, however, that the final spending decision still rests with cabinet, as with the IEF.

Liberal Leader Stephen McNeil said he doesn't believe Nova Scotians are getting a return on their investment.

"We committed money to Bowater; it's closed. We committed money to Scanwood; it's closed. We committed money to Imperial Oil; it's closing," McNeil said.

Syria. Violent clashes spreading in Damascus

Intense clashes between Syrian rebels and government forces backed by helicopters spread to new areas of the capital Damascus Tuesday, including a brief firefight near Parliament. It was the third straight day of fighting that has posed an unprecedented challenge to government rule in the seat of President Bashar Assad's power.

The violence is the most widespread and sustained fighting in the capital since the Syrian uprising began 16 months ago.

Terrified families were fleeing the city or said they were prepared to leave at a moment's notice. Residents said they were packing "get-away bags" in case they had to run for their lives.

"My bag has my family's passports, our university degrees, some cash and medicine," said a 57-year-old father of two told The Associated Press, asking that his first name not be used for fear of reprisals. "It is very hard to imagine leaving your home and everything you worked to get, but it's a matter of life and death."

The clashes broke up quickly as the rebels fled, but were a significant indicator of the rapidly spreading violence and the deep reach of the rebels. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pakistan. WHO doctor working with anti-polio campaign hit by gunfire

Gunmen in the Pakistani city of Karachi opened fire Tuesday on a vehicle carrying a doctor working with the World Health Organization on an anti-polio campaign, wounding him in the stomach, the organization said.

The head of the World Health Organization's polio-eradication program in Pakistan, Dr. Elias Durray, said the doctor is an international volunteer helping supervise the project. He said the man underwent surgery in Karachi.

Pakistan is in the middle of a campaign to vaccinate children under five. Taliban militants in northern Pakistan have barred the vaccination campaign from territory under their control, saying it can't go forward until the U.S. stops drone strikes.

In a statement, WHO said the attack did not appear to be specifically targeting the doctor.

"At this point, there is no evidence to suggest that this was a deliberate or targeted attack against polio-eradication efforts or WHO," the Geneva-based organization said.

Pakistan is one of only three countries where the disease is endemic. The virus usually infects children living in unsanitary conditions, attacks the nerves, and can kill or paralyze.

Draft feud divides Israel's coalition

Military. Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu loses key Kadima Party votes

Opposition

"We are going back with our heads held high to lead the nation in the opposition."

Kadima Party Leader Shaul Mofaz

Israel plunged toward a political crisis Tuesday after the largest member of the government quit, leaving Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu in charge of a hard-line coalition opposed to most Mideast peace moves.

The moderate Kadima Party voted to pull out of the government just two months after joining. The move appeared to push the country closer to early elections, a scenario that would paralyze Mideast diplomacy for months.

Even if Netanyahu manages to hold the truncated coalition together, the sudden crisis has broader implications for Mideast peace, leaving him in charge of a narrow parliamentary majority dominated by religious and nationalist hardliners who oppose concessions to the Palestinians.

Kadima Leader Shaul Mofaz had brought the party into the coalition to work with Netanyahu on ending a contentious, decades-old system that has granted draft exemptions to tens of thousands of ultra-Orthodox Jewish seminary students. But with a court-ordered Aug. 1 deadline looming, the sides were unable to forge a compromise.

Mofaz said he tried to forge a "new social contract," but was presented with "red lines" that couldn't be crossed.

Kadima is the largest party in Israel's parliament, winning one more seat than Netanyahu's Likud Party in the last election, but it was left outside the government when Netanyahu set up his original hard-line team.

The draft exemptions have caused widespread resentment among Israel's secular majority, who are required to perform two to three years of compulsory service. Ultra-Orthodox leaders have been equally adamant in their refusal to compromise, claiming their young men serve the nation through prayer and study.

Air force sex scandal goes to trial

A U.S. military jury Tuesday began hearing the case of an air force sergeant who faces the most serious charges in a widening sex scandal at the base where every American airman reports for basic training.

Staff Sgt. Luis Walker is among 12 instructors at Lackland Air Force Base in Texas who are being investigated, and faces the most serious charges — 28 counts, including rape, aggravated sexual contact and multiple counts of aggravated sexual assault. He could get up to life in prison and a dishonourable discharge if convicted.

Six of the 12 instructors under investigation face charges ranging from rape to adultery. At least 31 female trainees have been identified as victims.

The 10 female recruits

Walker is accused of either sexually assaulting or engaging in inappropriate sexual conduct with are expected to testify.

Maj. Naomi Dennis, one of Walker's attorneys, told jurors there is no evidence to substantiate the charges against Walker and suggested to jurors that the women may have made up the charges.

Again! Another brazen mass shooting shocks T.O.

Two dead, 21 sent to hospital. Horror comes to a crowded block party just weeks after a mall shooting left the city reeling

A mass shooting left Canada's biggest city in shock Tuesday. The searing hail of bullets at a Toronto neighbourhood block party killed two people and sent 21 others to hospital, including a 22-month-old toddler.

One of the two people killed was identified as 14-year-old Shyanne Charles of Toronto.

Police say it's the worst gun violence in the city's recent history — and they believe it was gang related.

More grimly, they suspect deadly retaliation to take place and were sending reinforcements to the racially diverse area Tuesday.

night when gunmen sprayed the crowd with bullets.

Tears shone in one man's eyes as he said: "I saw people running, I heard 'crack, crack' and I hit the ground."

"It was like a Quentin Tarantino movie."

Mayor Rob Ford called it a "horrible tragedy" but added: "I know this is the safest city in the world. I've always said that, I truly believe it."

Police Chief Bill Blair said police have received "some co-operation" from witnesses, and called on all community members who attended the party to help with the investigation.

Messages of grief quickly appeared on social media.

"The hood gained another angel to look over us, RIP," one person wrote on Twitter.

Activists angered. Scout leaders in U.S. refuse to drop ban on gays

After a confidential two-year review, the Boy Scouts of America on Tuesday emphatically reaffirmed its policy of excluding gays.

The Scouts cited support from parents as a key reason for keeping the policy and expressed hope the prolonged debate over it might subside.

Bitter reactions from gay-rights activists suggested that was unlikely.

The Scouts' national spokesperson, Deron Smith, said an 11-member special committee decided the exclusion policy "is absolutely the best policy" for the 112-year-old organization.

The Scouts' chief executive, Bob Mazucca, contended most Scout families support the policy, which applies to both adult leaders and Scouts.

But the president of the largest U.S. gay-rights group, Chad Griffin of the Human Rights Campaign, called the Scouts' decision "a missed opportunity of colossal proportions."

"With the country moving toward inclusion, the leaders of the Boy Scouts of America have instead sent a message to young people that only some of them are valued," he said.

"They've chosen to teach division and intolerance."

One ongoing protest campaign involves Jennifer Tyrrell, the Ohio mother of a seven-year-old Cub Scout who was ousted as a den mother because she is lesbian.

A report says more than 300,000 people have signed a petition urging the Scouts to reinstate Tyrrell.

Bomb threat. Accusation enrages border agents

1,300 jobs to go

The Canada Border Services Agency announced cuts of about 1,300 jobs across Canada in April — including about 300 jobs in Southern Ontario.

Allegations that disgruntled Canadian border agents may have been behind a bogus bomb threat have outraged their union.

The bomb threat forced Canadian and U.S. authorities to close the Ambassador Bridge for several hours.

But the allegations are "baseless," leaders of the union representing the agents said Tuesday.

The bomb threat, the second in recent days, was called in around 7:20 p.m. Monday to authorities on the U.S. side of the bridge that links Detroit with Windsor.

In a news release issued after the incident, the Detroit International Bridge Company, which owns the Ambassador Bridge, said it suspected the bomb threat had "something to do" with announced job cuts at the Canada Border Services Agency.

Jason McMichael, vice-president of the Customs and Immigration Union, said he was outraged at the allegations.

"Certainly they were completely baseless, completely without merit."

Magnotta mail sparks shutdown

An envelope addressed to murder suspect Luka Rocco Magnotta caused a major shutdown at a bustling Canada Post sorting centre in Montreal.

A union local official said police found a white powdery substance inside the envelope.

The incident prompted a lockdown at the centre and four employees were treated for psychological reactions, the union official said.

A police spokesperson said later that the substance was not considered dangerous.

A few hours later, however, a post office in the Montreal-area community of Ste-Julie was evacuated after staffers found a suspicious powder inside a bin that came from the Montreal sorting centre.

Canadian credit card users may face higher costs

Extra fees. Canadian retailers currently absorbing transaction charges when customers use their Visa or MasterCard

Canadian shoppers who use credit cards may soon find themselves slapped with extra fees, if retailers win a fight against being stuck with transaction charges from Visa and MasterCard.

Retail organizations renewed their calls Tuesday for Ottawa to loosen credit card regulations following a landmark ruling south of the border that could have implications for a case that will be decided by a federal tribunal later this year.

The Canadian Federation of Independent Business (CFIB), which has more than 100,000 member businesses across Canada, is calling for changes to the federally regulated code of conduct that would allow retailers more rights, including the ability to make credit card users pay a surcharge or refuse credit cards at their stores.

If successful, their campaign would settle a gripe between retailers and credit card operators, and allow merchants the freedom to either accept or deny certain credit cards at their registers. The CFIB wants merchants to have the ability to add surcharges on credit card users that would counteract the transaction fees charged by some credit card companies.

SPAM – ONE OF THE WORLD'S WONDERS

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca/justsaying

Let the bells ring out! Let the banners fly!

It's the 75th anniversary of Spam, the canned lunch meat that tastes like dog food. (Quickly, lest the Hormel people get offended, we're talking high-quality dog food.)

Back in the dietary Dark Ages, I literally grew up on the stuff and its legion of imitators (Spork, etc.). The gelatinous goop that came with it made me gag, but vapourized nicely when the Spam was fried, and fried Spam and fried eggs with fried potatoes was a common staple, along with anything else that could be fried.

Too often around our house, it resembled that legendary Monty Python sketch set at the Green Midget Café, where all the dishes came with Spam (e.g. Spam, Spam, Spam, Spam, egg and Spam), prompting an outraged customer to ask: "Don't you have anything without Spam in it?" while a band of Vikings belted out a rousing chorus of "Spam! Spam! Spam! Wonderful Spam!"

Made from ...

"Of course, classic Spam is allegedly composed of pork shoulder and ham, heavy on the shoulder, light on the ham."

Not sure how the Vikings ended up in a sketch about Spam.... Oh, those Monty Python guys.

If you have a tender tummy, you might want to skip over this next bit. Spam now comes in 13 varieties, including jalapeno, cheese, hickory smoke and, for a limited time (to celebrate the Broadway opening of Spamalot), golden honey grail and stinky French garlic.

Of course, classic Spam is allegedly composed of pork shoulder and ham, heavy on the shoulder, light on the ham. It was launched to a hungry, Depression-rattled nation on July 5, 1937, and since then more cans of Spam have been sold than there are people on Earth. That's a lot, more than seven billion and counting. If you slice it thin, you can feed a horde of Vikings on a single can, which retails for an average price of $2.97. Just add Kraft Dinner, spread ketchup over the whole thing and bon appétit!

While fastidious vegan locavores may turn up their noses, people in Guam can't get enough Spam, consuming more than 16 cans per person per year, according to that estimable journal of record, Time magazine. Sadly, 60 per cent of deaths in Guam are directly attributable to poor diet and lifestyle. Score one for fastidious vegan locavores.

For those who can't get enough of this stuff, there's the annual Spam Jam in Honolulu, another Spam hotspot. The 10th annual edition was held on April 28, where aficionados chowed down on Spam-fried rice loco moco or Spam nachos at Jimmy Buffett's.

Simpsons coming to Springfield?

A businessman in Springfield, Ore., says it's time for the city to embrace its most famous fictional residents and create a shopping district with a Simpsons theme. Jack Koehler owns Sweetie's Frozen Yogurt, and he says business has been up since he put a set of Simpsons statues in front of his store. He thinks the city should get involved, and he's proposing that a few blocks of downtown Springfield be turned into a Simpsons-themed shopping district. The city's community relations manager, Niel Laudati, tells KVAL there's no demand from the public, and he doubts anyone wants to spend tax dollars to license cartoon characters. But Laudati says the city would get behind the idea if it would benefit downtown and if other business owners and the community supported it.

Sometimes even villains get a second chance. The Dark Knight Rises, the last entry in Christopher Nolan's epic Batman trilogy, digs deep into Caped Crusader lore to reintroduce brawny bad guy Bane.

The abnormally strong antihero first appeared in the comics in 1993 but after a ridiculous appearance in Batman & Robin earned the title as the worst onscreen Batman baddie. As a scrawny convict pumped up by a drug known as Venom, he did little except growl and act as the punch line for a bad joke by his creator Dr. Jason Woodrue. Plenty of celebrities are hosting fundraising events for the Obama campaign, from Sarah Jessica Parker's swanky A-list party at her New York City apartment to Gwen Stefani's upcoming family picnic in Los Angeles. But only Sarah Silverman has offered sexual favours in exchange for campaign contributions.

In a short video titled An Indecent Proposal, Silverman — in her trademark cereal-stained hoodie and last-night's ponytail — attempts to persuade billionaire casino magnate Sheldon Adelson to cancel his $100 million check to Mitt Romney.

"If you give that $100 million to Obama instead of Romney, I will — well, I won't have sex with you because we're not married and I'm a nice girl, but I will 'scissor' you wearing a bikini bottom through to fruition," she says.

"You'll be the only elderly billionaire on the block to have traditional lesbian sex through to climax with a girl who had her own show on Comedy Central."

Like all Sarah Silverman skits, it's probably funny if you can keep your eyes open — but we're not risking it.

New Yorkers embracing ferry life

More than one million passengers have ridden ferries across the East River since the service was launched just over one year ago, New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg said Monday. That's more than double in initial projection of 409,000 riders, Bloomberg said as he and City Council Speaker Christine Quinn rode the ferry from North Williamsburg in Brooklyn to Pier 11 in lower Manhattan to mark the milestone. The ferries, which make it fast and easy to reach waterfront businesses, parks and other locations, are popular with tourists as well as locals.

Hudson River Park: A destination for recreation

Urban oasis. A group of dedicated New Yorkers have turned a once-derelict patch of Manhattan into a place for outdoor fun

In the past decade, the decrepit piers and industrial zones along eight kilometres of the Hudson River on Manhattan's West Side have been utterly transformed.

Hudson River Park is now a destination that gets 17 million visits annually, with a bike path, green spaces, playgrounds and recreation ranging from mini-golf and skateboarding to kayaking and even stand-up paddleboarding. Melissa Lopez rented a bike a few weeks ago and was amazed at what she saw as she rode downtown through the park.

"It was gorgeous, like a little nature haven, beautiful flowers, trees, and only when you looked over to your left (at the buildings), did you realize you were in between a concrete jungle and this beautiful river," said Lopez, 29, who came in from her home in suburban Westchester for the day. "Everyone was doing something active — sunbathing, rollerblading, bike riding. There was one pier with a volleyball court with sand. I kept asking my boyfriend, 'Are we really in New York City?'"

Lopez's reaction is proof of just how much things have changed along the river. For much of New York City's history, "the waterfront was where the industrial areas were," said Madelyn Wils, president and CEO of the Hudson River Park Trust. "Then in the 1960s, the port business went away and the waterfront areas became so derelict they were an embarrassment. If you saw pictures of what this looked like even 10 years ago, you'd say, 'How could anyone let that happen?'"

Looking at the ribbon of spotless walkways, plantings and creative play areas along the river today between Battery Park City in Lower Manhattan and 59th Street, it's hard to imagine what Wils is describing.

But when she and other New Yorkers began working to create the park in the late 1990s, one of her goals as a mother of three living in Lower Manhattan was simply to make more places where kids could play. In 1998, the city and state provided land for the park, and construction began in 2001.

Last year's opening of Pier 25 in Tribeca, now one of the park's most popular areas with mini-golf and volleyball, was a crowning achievement.

There are still small sections along the water awaiting redevelopment — a pound for towed cars, a facility for Sanitation Department trucks — but the walkways and bike path are uninterrupted. (Wils says the park has "more bikes on the bike paths than anywhere else in the country — 6 million a year.") Between playgrounds, lawns, sports facilities, boating options and other amenities, the park's attractions number in the dozens.

"There are so many different boating opportunities in the park now," said Nancy Brous, metropolitan region director for the Hudson River Watertrail. Many of the programs are run by volunteers to educate New Yorkers who may never have been in a kayak or out on the river before, Brous said, but the walk-up kayaking programs also get "a lot of out-of-town visitors. This is something that's really going to be driving the tourist trade as time goes on and more people seek it out."

Another aspect of the recreational boating programs is teaching the public about the river. It's a tidal estuary, so the currents are strong, and the water can be murky as the tidal flow stirs up silt. "It's not crystal clear and you can't see that deep into it, but it's not pollution," Brous said. "People are very surprised when they learn about the water quality. Just by the birds you can tell it's clean — they're out there and they're catching fish."

Visitors to Hudson River Park relax on a sculpture. MARY ALTAFFER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hudson River Park is also home to historic vessels that can be toured; public art like the AIDS memorial at 11th Street; yoga and other fitness programs; concerts, walks and talks, including a Sunday morning nature tour where participants learn about the park's 85 species of birds. Little wonder the park has started turning up in travel guides to New York City as an option for visitors looking for something to do besides shopping, theatre and museums.

The combined flavours of bok choy, mushrooms and this sesame sauce is outstanding.

I use whole oyster mushrooms for appearance as well as texture. Feel free to substitute other mushrooms, but it is best to slice them in large pieces.

I love to serve this alongside a fish or chicken dish.

1. Combine the soy sauce, sesame oil, oyster sauce, sugar, garlic, ginger and chili sauce in a small bowl and set aside.

2. Lightly coat a large, non-stick skillet with cooking spray, add the oil and set over medium-high heat. Add the mushrooms and sauté for 5 minutes or until tender. Add the sauce and cook for 2 minutes, until slightly thickened.

3. Place a shallow layer of water in a large saucepan and bring to a boil. Place the bok choy in the saucepan, cover and cook for 2 minutes or just until it is bright green.

4. Drain well and place on a serving dish. Top with the sautéed mushrooms and sesame sauce, sprinkle with sesame seeds and serve immediately. ROSE REISMAN'S FAMILY FAVORITES (WHITECAP BOOKS)

Students, don't despair about debt

Getting in the red, without turning red.
Why education pays but BMWs don't

JELEEN YU
TalentEgg.ca

Let's face it. Debt happens.

It's a fact of life that almost all of us will need a little financial help at one point or another, whether it's for our home, car, livelihood, education — even our groceries.

Debt is an inevitable circumstance of life, and, for the most part, it's categorically evil.

But here's the kicker: Debt isn't always such a bad thing.

The basics

Ever heard of good debt?

Yes, it's an oxymoron, strange and it seems mythical at best, but believe it or not there are some things out there worth owing money for.

Here's what's on the "good" list:

- Your home
- Your own business

Apply yourself! Scholarships and bursaries can help to ease the strain of student debt. ISTOCK

• Your education

These are otherwise known as things that will increase in value over time and give you the best bang for your borrowed buck. Because you're borrowing to finance things that won't lose their value (and will actually earn you money in the long-run), this kind of debt is considered good and justifiable.

Bad debt, on the other hand, is money borrowed for things that will depreciate in value over time, sometimes even instantly (think: as soon as you leave the store!). Consumable goods like clothes, cars, video games and flat-screen TVs are expendables, as are pricey out-of-town trips you can't afford.

Left unmanaged, this kind of debt could leave you facing years — even decades — of loan payback ahead.

And the worst "bad" debt you can make? Credit card debt, since it usually carries the highest interest rates and the most onerous payback schedules out there.

Education gives back

Student loans — burdensome as they may seem during payback time — are considered some of the best debts to get into, and for good reason. While we all know the value of a good education, student loans have the potential to give back much more than what they take, and not just in

NBL Canada. Josep Claros not expected to return for second season because of family reasons

MATTHEW WUEST
matthew.wuest@metronews.ca

The Halifax Rainmen are in search of a new head coach.

Although there's still a slight chance Josep (Pep) Claros could be back for a second season, Rainmen owner Andre Levingston said Tuesday it's more much more likely the native of Barcelona will take a year off to be with his family.

Levingston said he plans to have a head coach in place by the first week of August so he can prepare for the National Basketball League of Canada tryout combine on Aug. 25 and 26, and the draft on Aug. 27.

"I have to move forward," Levingston told Metro. "I talked to (Claros) about it and told him I can't wait forever because I need a coach in place for the combine. I'm moving forward with an interview process so I'm prepared (to hire somebody) and not behind the eight ball if he decides not to come back."

Claros, a veteran coach with an impressive international resumé, guided the team to a second-place NBL Canada finish last season, going 23-13. He took the Rainmen to the league's inaugural final before the London Lightning eliminated them in a highlight-packed five-game series.

Claros, who has two young children including one less than a year old, left immediately after the season ended and coached Pioneros de Quintana Roo to a FIBA Americas League championship.

"If I was a betting man, I would say that Pep will not be returning," Levingston said.

Levingston said replacing Claros will be difficult.

"You're looking for somebody who, first and foremost, is knowledgeable and passionate about the game, but also has the ability to get every ounce out of every player," he said. "Pep was able to do that."

The Rainmen haven't signed anybody for the 2012-13 season but have protected five players: guards Joey Haywood, Taliek Brown and Chris Hagan and forwards Tyrone Levett and Darnell Hudgee.

Though it won't be easy, Levingston hopes to re-sign all of them and build around them with an infusion of fresh blood.

"I've really spent a lot of time scouting this summer," Levingston said. "Now, I'm going to start looking for a new head coach who can help us to get to that next level and win a championship."

Aim getting better with age

Soccer. Canada's captain Sinclair developed her game while keeping up with big brother

Whenever Mike Sinclair drives by the old house in Burnaby, B.C., he can't help but marvel at the fact it's still standing.

"It took a beating," Sinclair says with a laugh. "I don't know how it's still upright. But I guess that's what you get when you get two really competitive kids around the same age."

Those two kids were Mike and younger sister Christine, who would leave countless broken windows and scuffed walls in her wake en route to becoming Canada's finest women's soccer player.

"Oh God, our windows, our next-door neighbours' windows, the windows of our neighbours two houses down," he said. "We've broken more things."

The concrete basement floor of their three-bedroom house provided the perfect venue for everything from roller-hockey to golf to soccer.

Fast forward a couple of decades and Christine Sinclair's aim has definitely improved. The 29-year-old is Canada's leading goal-scorer and has the Canadian goalkeeper Erin McLeod said it looked "like a zigzag."

Her goal was the lone bright spot at an otherwise disastrous World Cup that saw the Canadians knocked out after the preliminary round without a win.

But Sinclair said spirits are high heading into London. The team hired Englishman John Herdman as head coach in the fall and went on to beat Brazil to win the Pan American Games in October.

With 12 returnees from the Beijing Olympic team, Sinclair said Canada will field a squad that is wiser from its experiences in China.

ing, but now that there's a core group of us who have been there before, we can sort of help the younger players know what to expect that we didn't know four years ago."

Such as not wasting energy chasing after superstar athletes.

"I remember our team four years ago trying to get pictures with people during times when normally in camp you'd be resting, lying in bed watching TV. But instead people were out stalking Lionel Messi and things like that. That needs to change." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Basketball. London likely last hurrah for Canadian women's captain Gabriele

Every morning for the past several years, Teresa Gabriele has crawled out of bed in pitch darkness to stock bread.

The alarm rings at 3:45 a.m. and she's in her first store in Abbotsford, B.C., by 4:30, when most people are still fast asleep.

Not the most glamorous work for Canada's women's basketball captain, but her job with her family's bread business has allowed her to pursue her Olympic dreams — and her appearance in London will be the punctuation mark on an illustrious career.

The 32-year-old point guard

Teresa Gabriele TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

from Mission, B.C., doesn't see her work as a sacrifice and scoffs at any suggestion she's put her life on hold.

"This is my dream and what I love to do, so this is what I'm doing right now," Gabriele said after a practice Tuesday at the Air Canada Centre in Toronto.

Gabriele has been the mainstay of Canada's women's team for more than a decade, and is the only remaining player from the 2000 Sydney Games, the last time a Canadian basketball team has stepped onto sport's biggest stage.

"I'm thinking of retiring after this, so it's a storybook ending for me," Gabriele said. "I started my career very early with an Olympics and then to be able to end it with an Olympics, it's awesome."

The Canadians qualified for the Games at the 11th hour, beating Japan in a must-win game in a last-chance qualifier on Canada Day to earn the final berth.

"We were just telling everybody we wanted to qualify on Canada Day," Gabriele laughed about their nail-biting run through qualifying.

Pistorius finishes second in final tuneup in Italy

South African double-amputee sprinter Oscar Pistorius finished second in a 400-metre race in Italy on Tuesday, his final tune-up for the London Olympics. Pistorius clocked 46.56 seconds — well off the personal best of 45.07 he ran at the same meet last year — to finish behind Calvin Smith of the United States. Smith won in 45.52. PAOLO GIOVANNINI/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Track. Blake on 'right path' after winning final race before Games begin

Yohan Blake warmed up for the London Olympics by timing 9.85 seconds to win the 100 metres at a meet Tuesday in Lucerne, Switzerland, his first competitive race since beating Usain Bolt twice at the Jamaican Olympic trials.

Blake was far from the fastest out of the blocks but powered through the field with legal wind assistance of 1.6 metres per second. Jamaica teammate Michael Frater was second in 10.

"Definitely I am on the right path for the Olympics," the 21-year-old world champion said. "This is where I am supposed to be. I want to remain unbeaten and that's what I am

Rain may go away for Games opening

The sun may, just may, shine on the London Olympics.

The Met Office, which forecasts the weather in one of the world's most fickle climates, said Tuesday the rain that has soaked England for weeks and kept temperatures cool could give way to sunshine in time for the opening ceremony on July 27.

Apart from raining on London's parade, the weather has been worrying organizers of equestrian and rowing events, where venues have been waterlogged by weeks of constant rain.

Engines

The ES 350's powertrain is straightforward, consisting of a 268-horsepower 3.5-litre V6 accompanied by a six-speed automatic transmission that carries over virtually unchanged from the 2012 edition.

But, for 2013 it doesn't end there. A new ES 300h hybrid features a 156-horsepower 2.5-litre four-cylinder gas engine that combines with a 141-horsepower electric motor to generate 200 net horsepower. Both function through a continuously variable transmission.

The hybrid borrows its powertrain from the Toyota Camry hybrid and represents a natural extension of the ES brand, especially since the recent demise of the Toyota-Prius-based HS 250h.

2013 Lexus ES 350/ES 300h

- Type: Four-door, front-wheel-drive midsize entry-luxury sedan.
- Engines (hp): 3.5-litre DOHC V6 (268); 2.5-litre DOHC 4 with electric motor (200, net).
- Mileage: L/100 km (city/hwy) 10.7/7.0 (3.5).
- Base Price: $44,000 (est.)

Interior

Other than the primary tach and speedometer gauges, the dashboard's control centre is a busy spot, with numerous minute knobs and buttons handling ventilation, audio and communications tasks. Fortunately, the console-mounted Remote Touch Interface can manipulate much of these systems in a relatively uncomplicated manner.

Base content

Being in the luxury realm, the ES 350 starts out with considerable standard equipment including power moonroof, 10-way adjustable power front seats, backup monitor, push-button start and an eight-speaker audio system. There's also a Drive Mode selector with Normal, Eco, or Sport settings for the powertrain and steering system.

Review. It's about time the world regarded the ES as a real Lexus

MALCOLM GUNN
Wheelbase Media

More style and substance are features the 2013 Lexus ES 350 can brag about. However the Toyota-Camry-based sedan can now include superlative fuel economy to its bag of tricks in the form of the gasoline-electric ES 300h hybrid.

The ES has always enjoyed a sterling reputation with Lexus buyers as the fleet's go-to entry-luxury model, even though the sportier IS series is less expensive. But in this league, size counts for plenty and the longer, wider and roomier ES beats the pants off the IS in the space race.

For 2013, interior volume has been slightly increased due to the addition of about five centimetres between the front and rear wheels. That adjustment makes the ES more livable, especially for rear-seat riders, but it's the car's outward appearance that's bound to make it a lot more likeable. Lexus's new character-building corporate face features a prominent lower air intake that first appeared on the GS sedan, along with restyled headlights and shapelier hood. It's a look that will show up on the rest of the fleet in due course.

In addition, the backside has been reworked to give the sedan a bit more bustle. The physical adjustments add considerable sparkle to what had been a design that for years was unnecessarily understated.

With its luxurious cabin environment, stress-free engine performance and trouble-free reliability, the ES should continue to garner serious consideration from entry-luxury shoppers. Dial in an invigorated redesign plus a fuel-sipper option and more folks than ever will likely vote y-ES.

It might have a Lexus logo on the top of it, but the 268-horsepower 3.5-litre V6 is also used in the Toyota Camry. The new hybrid drivetrain is also from the Camry hybrid.

A look at the rear of the ES 350.

That's right, jack

If you tow a medium to large trailer, you know what a hassle it is to use cinder blocks or pieces of wood to get the trailer to sit at the desired height. Where do you put the blocks when they're not in use, anyway? Attaching the sturdy Flip Jack Foot from Fastway products would appear to eliminate that problem.

When secured to the trailer's tongue jack, it automatically drops down when the jack is extended, thereby adding up to six extra inches in length. It also automatically tucks up out of the way when the trailer jack is retracted. The Flip Jack Foot is available for 2 and 2.25-inch tongue jacks for $50 US from the company at fastwaytrailer.com, which also shows a list of local dealers.

Second Gear.

drive@metronews.ca

From 2006 to 2010, the E60 generation of BMW's M5 sedan offered up a slew of performance upgrades to handle the 500-horsepower output of the most powerful factory 5-Series yet.

The M5 isn't a car for the faint of heart — and high fuel and insurance costs mean a more modest 5-Series model with a smaller engine may make more sense for most shoppers who don't require the services of one of the fastest four-door cars on the planet.

Common Issues

Ensure all electronics on the M5 you're considering are working as expected. Note that reports of a 'frozen' iDrive central command system aren't uncommon. Watch for warning indicators that may become illuminated on your test-drive, especially pertaining to the SMG transmission, if so equipped. Many owners have reported some level of problems with the computer brain that controls this sophisticated transmission. Some also report problems with the oil lines and solenoids that operate the engine's valve timing system in earlier years.

A full check of the M5's various (and complicated) electronics systems by a BMW service centre is key to confidence ahead of a purchase.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Engine

The M5 came exclusively with a 5-litre V10 developing 500 horsepower. Manual or SMG transmissions were available, and all models were rear-wheel drive.

What Owners Like

The last-generation M5 was praised by its owners for looks, exclusivity, performance, thrills, comfort and a high-quality cabin. Supportive seats and the convenience of a sedan were also highly rated.

What Owners Dislike

Many owners report frustration with terrible fuel mileage, and a rough and awkward feel to the M5's SMG transmission.

Verdict

Many of its owners will verify that the M5 isn't a car that's ideal for those after fantastic fuel consumption or inexpensive repair bills. However, as a four-door rocket-sedan, it has virtually no equals.

New record for motorcycles at Dover

Autopilot

AUTO PILOT
Mike Goetz
drive@metronews.ca

Are you superstitious? I think I'm regular-stitious. I walk under ladders, but never carrying a black cat. Motorcyclists seem to be incredibly non superstitious. They think that the most superstitious date on the calendar — Friday the 13th — is the absolute bomb.

It's been a tradition since 1981 to drive your motorcycle to the resort town of Port Dover, Ont., on the shores of Lake Erie, every Friday the 13th, regardless of which month it falls on.

Every year it gets bigger, even the years when the "Black Fridays" show up on cooler months. With the last Friday the 13th of 2012 happening in July, and hot weather on the forecast, many predicted that this would be the biggest turnout ever. And it was.

About 50,000 motorcycles and 150,000 people were the numbers I heard repeatedly. I didn't actually count all the bikes and on-lookers clogging the streets of Dover, because I was too busy getting heat stroke, or what I thought was heat stroke. Turns out I was instantly cured by an adult beverage and some pan-fried Perch at the Erie Beach Hotel. But suffice to say, you couldn't swing a stuffed animal, like say a cat, without hitting leather, chrome, or a large person with a bandana. So I didn't.

Funnily enough, our gang didn't arrive at Dover via bikes, or via cars. Our pal Kirby hosted us in nearby St. Williams, and dropped us off by boat.

Great fun but I wouldn't necessarily recommend the water route, as dock space on that day is super tight. But with so many people on the pier looking at every boat coming into the marina, I can now appreciate how Queen Elizabeth felt on her Jubilee tour down the Thames.

It was my first Friday the 13th at Port Dover. Here are a few impressions and observations of the day, from this rookie attendee.

Last Friday, the 13th that is, saw roughly 50,000 motorcycles invade the town of Port Dover, Ont. MIKE GOETZ/FOR METRO

• Very hot and humid, saved only by a slight breeze.

• Did I mention it was hot?

• A warm day meant a lot of skin was uncovered. As usual, this is good and bad.

• The vibe was awesome. All those bikes and all those people and all that heat and nobody was cranky or pushy.

• The cruiser crowd, which prefers leather and Harley Davidson motorcycles, are definitely the majority, but there was solid representation from all motorcycle genres — sport bikes, vintage, touring, standards, trikes, etc.

• Huge police presence. But they didn't seem to have much to do, other than direct traffic.

• Port-a-potties and hot sun? Not a good combination.

• Very well organized. Only bikes allowed into and out of town by one road, and under the control of those efficient and courteous police officers.

People arriving by car have to park way out of town, in a designated farmer's field, and then get shuttled by school bus.

• Hundreds of bikes rolling into, or out of town, en masse, makes for great mechanical theatre — lots of flashy visuals, amazing soundtrack.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20
Temptation will come knocking today. Do you answer the door and let it in or do you call on all your powers of self-control and ignore it? Only you can decide, but consider this: Is enjoying yourself really a sin?

Taurus

April 21 - May 21
You may find it hard to control your emotions today. Pluto, planet of extremes, will make you a bit touchy and maybe a bit jealous too. So, watch you don't go over the top and say something you'll later regret.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21
Someone you work with seems determined to find fault with everything you do and it's getting you down. All you can do is sit tight and wait for him or her to get fed up with his or her carping.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23
Close your ears to gossip because hardly any of what you hear today will be true. Someone is trying to poison your mind against a person you have known and trusted for years. Don't fall for it.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23
Steer clear of a feud that is none of your business. If you get involved, it will make it appear you have taken sides. Before you know it, you'll be involved in a war of words no one can win.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
The more others say you need to make changes, the more you must resist. This is not the right time to throw everything up in the air. That applies as much to your personal life as it does to your career.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Something you have grown used to over the years will go out of your life today but that's good because it has been taking up more time and space than it deserves. Make room for new things.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
Don't be silly and make promises you might want to back out of later on. And don't use emotional blackmail to get what it is you most desire. What will you do if your bluff is called?

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Both at home and at work you should strive for a more relaxed and forgiving attitude today — not because others deserve to be forgiven but because it will be you who suffers most if you get uptight.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
If things don't work out the way you plan today, chances are it's only a temporary setback. There's no need to panic. Have more patience with yourself and, most importantly, think long-term in everything you do.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb 19
No matter how much others may say you should loosen the purse strings, you know it's the wrong thing to do. Luxury items must stay off your shopping list until such time as you can afford them.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20
Passions will be running high today, so think before you act both at home and at work. If someone in your family does not like the friends you hang out with come right out and ask them why. SALLY BROMPTON

Volunteers. Assuring smooth sailing for all events

JON
For Metro

Organizing a massive event like Tall Ships requires a hard-working core of staff, and a huge cast of supporting volunteers. Tall Ships festivals around Nova Scotia are counting on citizens to pitch in. Jennifer Angel with the Tall Ships festival in Halifax says they have 20 staff and more than 500 volunteers.

"It's a huge commitment, both for our staff and volunteers. We began planning a year and a half ago," she says.

While staff handles the day-to-day work, the festival couldn't happen without the volunteers.

Ambassadors

- Known as "Tall Ships Ambassadors," more than 500 volunteers will be present around the waterfront to assist with Tall Ships Nova Scotia 2012. Look for them in blue Tall Ships shirts and hats.

"Some have been with us since the beginning of the planning," she says.

"They do everything from support, ticket-taking to greeting and providing information, to more complicated roles."

The commitment ranges from a few hours manning one of the waterfront tents during the festival to help visitors find what they are looking for, to a bigger commitment to act as a ship's liaison. Those people are paired with a specific Tall Ship and work with them months ahead of time to make sure they have a good visit.

The bigger a role you take, the more enriching the experience will be, organizers say.

Volunteers come from all walks of life, including retirees who want to help out and Tall Ship enthusiasts who love the chance to meet with crews.

Other volunteers have served in the navy and want to help their fellow sailors in port.

"Historically, it's provided a really good experience for volunteers. We have a lot of the same people each time the event comes to Nova Scotia," Angel says.

"Tall Ships events are signature events for the city and province, and volunteers play a huge role in the success of the event," says Colin MacLean, president and CEO of the Waterfront Development Corporation.

"Volunteers help us to welcome the ships, captains and crews to the ports, and showcase the best of Nova Scotia to residents and tourists."

An experience of a lifetime

Journey. Local resident recounts memorable trip aboard a Tall Ship to canals of Amsterdam

RICHARD WOODBURY
For Metro

Not everybody can say they have travelled through the canals of Amsterdam on a Tall Ship, but Charlotte Riley can.

For almost 30 years, the St. Margaret's Bay resident has volunteered at the Tall Ships in Halifax. In 2000, she was able to parlay that experience into a five-week trip that eventually took her to Amsterdam.

"We raced from Halifax to the Isle of Wight in the English Channel and then we went to Scheveningen, Holland, which is the port next to The Hague and we stayed there for 10 days," says Riley. "Then we took part in Sail 2000 in Amsterdam, which was a huge Tall Ships event."

The ship was the Dar Młodzieży, a Polish merchant marine training vessel.

With her background as a French and Spanish teacher, Riley was asked to come along for the journey and teach Spanish to the roughly 90 cadets on board.

Also on board were about 30 merchant mariners, as well as a handful of paying tourists.

While Riley has many memories of the trip, a few stand out in particular, including a four- or five-day portion of the trip where because of the exceptional sailing conditions, the ship was speeding along at a 40-degree angle.

"To be under sail with absolutely no auxiliary power was amazing," says Riley.

Not surprisingly, sailing on a 40-degree angle had its advantages and disadvantages. While the ship set some personal speed and distance records, it made life on board a little tricky.

"Everything was pretty much tied down," says Riley. "You end up sleeping in a little ball in one of the corners of your bunk, if you sleep at all."

For her teaching duties, the blackboard that was suspended from the ceiling became her anchor.

"I had to hang on to that blackboard for dear life as I was teaching," explains Riley.

All in all, sailing with another Tall Ships vessel is an experience Riley would gladly replicate in a heartbeat.

"Absolutely," she says.
